BACKSTORY

Your life was never straightforward. Your mother is a preacher at an evangelical church in Hammersmith, London, and you always seem to take second place. You're not sure about your father; you've heard a few things about him, but why should you get in touch when he doesn't bother? You left school at 17 and got a job in IT. Then, you married at 19 and were about to enrol for training as a special police constable when you unexpectedly got pregnant. None of that stopped you though, and now you're a full-time police officer and a mum—and if that's not enough, you ended up becoming a Newtonian apprentice!

EQUIPMENT

Warrant card, mechanical watch, mobile phone, and a grab bag containing police notebook, pens, spare phone battery, Airwave radio, torch (flashlight) and spare batteries, Folly and Met forms, crime scene barrier tape, PPE pouch, waterproof clothes, snacks, bottled water, and Blackstone's Crime Investigators' Handbook.

BACKSTORY

You grew up in Dundee and went to a private boarding school.
University wasn't for you, and so
you dropped out and got a job in a betting shop. Joey, another staff member, introduced you to a sword-fighting class and you loved
it. After a year, the instructor
invited you to join a higher level, invite-only group. This group was something else, and it quickly became apparent that they weren't only using swords, but magic as well. One of the senior pupils is also a cop, and that was the spark that led to your present life. So now you're a police officer and apprentice living in the Folly.

BACKSTORY

Rugby was always your game, but then you're built for it. You were never just brawn though, you had brains too. You studied medicine in Manchester, and then followed your boyfriend to London. You've been together for over ten years. The idea of being a GP leaves you cold; quietly talking to old ladies about their lumbago—no, thanks!

You prefer the excitement and chaos of A&E. Staff from the Folly questioned you about some curious individuals you treated, and they seemed to warm to you—so much so, that they've called on your help a few times, and the rest, as they say, is history. So now you spend half your time at the hospital and the rest at the Folly.

BACKSTORY

You grew up in a small town in Kent, the so-called Garden of England, where you attended the local grammar school. After university, you put down roots in London and have stayed there ever since. You found out at a young age that you and your sister were adopted.

The 17th century is your period, with an especial interest in the life of Sir Isaac Newton. Indeed, it was your chosen specialist subject on a well-known TV quiz show, and following that appearance, you were contacted by someone from the Folly. Turns out you have a mutual interest!

BACKSTORY

The main thing you remember from your childhood is a lot of shouting. Your mother moved from the Philippines to London, England, in the 1980s, and married your well-off architect father. They must have been happy once. Your father died a few years back, and his new wife took most of his estate. The rock in your life was your stepsister. She was a few years younger than you but she had problems no one knew about. You were the one who found her body. You don't have a fixed abode—you get by day-to-day—& plans are what other people make. Sometimes, those people from the Folly give you jobs to do—they mostly seem like a good lot.

BACKSTORY

You grew up near Leicester. You did well in school and excelled in music. Then you moved down to London to study and lodged with one of your aunties. Following uni, you took a data entry job with the Metropolitan Police Service. Yet, music has always been your passion, and you spend your evenings practising and writing songs in your bedroom. So far, you've made some money playing gigs but you're biding your time until you get your big break. Your auntie doesn't approve of you spending so much time in your room. Your friend, Morgan Omans, asked your advice on a music-related case and that's how you got involved with the Folly.
